Witnessed by scores of persons on Fourth Avenue who peered through the glass show case the weird and terrible struggle betwen Conn and the deadly reptile took place. Bitten three times by the monster Conn still struggled on, holding the reptile by the throat until the panicstricken people in the store made their escape in terror.

According to the story of Witnesses, Charles Conn, accompanied by a friend, Eugene Osier, a drummer for a New York firm, with whom he room ed at Rufer's Hotel, entered store shortly after 9 o'clock, and after purchasing cigars viewed the spake which was on exhibition in small wooden how case. Edward Ries, a clerk in the store, who owned the snake, warned Conn to be careful of the repfile.

Conn, who was a former civil engnieer and who had lived in Arizona. only laughed at the warning, saying that he was a snake charmer and that no rattler could best him. With these words he withdrew the reptile from its cage, and, holding it by the throat, exhibited length to those present. The snake struggled in his clutches and the whirr of its seven rattles frightened ed the audience. Conn then replaced the snake in the box and a few persons gathered and talked of the incident.

Before anyone had recovered from the first exhibition of the amatuer stake charmer, he again drew the reptile from its cage and allowed it to coil about his right arm. Hardly noticing it, he began to chat with the men in the store of his experience in the West with rattlers, when sudfrom his grasp and plunged its fangs into his right hand.

When the soil is moist but not sticky the drag does its best work. As the soil in a field will bake if plowed wet, so the road will bake if the drag is usedon it will, wet. If the roadway is full of holes or badly rutted, the drag should be used once when the ground in soft and slushy. This is particularly applicable before a cold spell in winter, when it is possible to so prepare the surface that it will freeze

Not infrequently conditions are piet which may be overcome by slight change in the manner of hitching. Shortening the chain tends to lift the front slab and make the cutting slight, while a longer hitch causes the slab to sink more deeply into the earth and act on the principle of a plow.

If a furrow of earth is to be moved, the doubletree should be attached close to the ditch end of the drag, and the driver should stand with one foot on the extreme end of the front slab.

Conditions are so varied in different localities, however, that it is quite impossible to lay down specific rules. Certain sections of a roadway will require more attention than others, because of steep grades, wet weather springs, soil conditions exposure to sun and wind, washes, etc. There is one condition, however, in which special attention should be given. Clay roads under persistent draggings frequently become too high in the center. This may be corrected by dragging the earth towards the center of the road twice, and away from it once.

There is no question as to the economy of this road making implement. either in first cost or operation. In six counties in Kansas in 1906 the cost of maintaining ordinary earth reads, with-out the aid of the splitlog drag, averaged $42.50 a mile. These figures were furnished by Prof. W. C. Hoad, of the University of Kansas, who secured them from official records of the counties.

Some figures furnished by F. P. Sanborn and R. H. Aishton, General Manager of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, have revealed the wonders of this simple device. Mr-Sanborn said: "The least expense per mile per annum for split-log dragging was $1.50, the greatest a little over $6, and the average expense per mile for 51/2 miles a little over $3. I have lived along this road all my seen them freer from mud and dust. despite the fact that during the season we have experienced the extremes of weather conditions."

The testimony of Mr. Aishton is equally trong. Learning that a township in Iowa had been making an investigation of the split log drag and had been experimenting with it for a year on 28 miles of highway, he sent an agent to sethat although the town board pald per-NOT to the Courier-Journal the cost of making the drags and of ported to have been "like a race track the greater portion of the palpitation, sinking spells are symptoms of a weak heart, struggling to do its work. It must keep the blood in circulation to carry nourishment to make flesh, bone and muscle, and remove the wornout particles. When it cannot do this, it must have help. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure gives strength to the heart nerves and muscles, and increases the heart action.

"I are great to say that I am so much improved in health. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure cured me when several doctors failed. I think no other medicine could do for me what Heart Cure has done. My case was bad; bad as it could be at times. I had difficulty in getting my breath, my heart beat so fast at times that I thought it impossible to live without relief; the pain was very severe in my left side, and my nerves was all unstrung. I had almost given up all hope of being cured, and I am sure I would not, if I had not taken the Heart Cure. I take great pleasure in resommending Dr. Miles' remedies to all who suffer with heart disease."

three or four weeks ago the agricultural appropriation bill was under consideration in committee of the whole in the house of representatives, and on March 25, Mr. Stanley of Kentucky got the floor and proceeded to reply to a very able speech by Mr. Dalzell, some time earlier, in which the accomplished statesman from Pennsylvania undertook to contrast Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson, much to the disparagement of the latter, and much to the credit of the former.

Mr. Dalzell got his history of the New England school-the Harvard set -Henry Adams, Henry Cabot Lodge, Theodore Roosevelt, and so on, not to forget William E. Curtis and Edward S. Elits, and it made the sedate thinker from Pittsburg, ordinarily so wary and so accurate, a very credulous per son. We see the somewhat similar effect when the brilliant mind of Gertrude Atherton contemplates Hamilton and Jefferson through the same his-Owsley Stanley's repty to Datzell was crushing and conclusive. He painted the two men, Hamilton and Jefferson, precisely as they were, and placed them precisely where authentic history will put them—the Virginian the wisest of political philosophers; the West Indian the most brilliant of political adventurers. Many of Stanley's political friends tried to dissuade him from the encounter. They did not know much about Hamfiton and Jefferson, but they knew a deal of John Dalzell, whose conclusions they had never embraced, but whose statements of facts they had never challenged.

Stanley did not dare to enter the lists without being armed cap-a-pie, and he spent a week of almost cease less investigation night and day. He searched fifty volumes and drew from manuscripts in the national library and the state department. When he began the Democrats were apprehensive and the Republicans confident. A few minutes the Democrats were sanguine and the Republicans confused. Both were astonished. Never before in more than 100 years of historymaking had the American congress sene the two great fathers of American politics as they were and as they will be estimated by the future Gibbon

Alexander Hamilton was born a British subject, in the insignificant island of Nevis, in the West Indies. His father was a Scotchman and his mother a French woman. In his earliest youth he gave earnest of the splendid genius of which nature had endowed him. Ere he was twenty he was the first political controversialist in the colony of New York, whether with tongue or pen. His motto might have been:

Why, then, the world's mine oyster, Which I with mind will open,"

As a political writer he was greater than Paine and little inferior to Burke. As an orator he was, perhaps, saries of the revolution he had apond to Henry only of the Revolutionary generation. Had he gone to of filling a bigger place in English anhals than the younger Pitt. Had he gone to France and escaped the Terror he might have been second to Napoleon Bonaparte alone, an honest Talleyrand, a more fortunate Massena.

Instead, Hamilton came to America and assumed the role of Hampden. He opposed Lord North, not for the tax he levied so much as the principle it involved. It was a little bit of a tax, a great piece of folly on the part of the ministry, though not oppressive; but if allowed to be a precedent, it was in the power of the crown to make serfs of the colonists. Hamilton entered the army and became the secretary of the commander-in-chief, and In the field he was as daring as he was able in the forum. That arch-flatterer and matchless scoundrel, Talleyrand, declared that Hamilton was greater than Napoleon or Fox, which is all bosh: but Hamilton's eulogists are absurd enough to take what the unscrupulous French miscreant said for his real opinion. Well might the shade of Hamilton pray to be delivered from American history as she is writ.

Hamilton is actually held up as the father of the constitution, when the one thing for which he had more contempt than for that instrument was the Articles of Confederation which it supplanted. As for patriotism—the real stuff, not the brand described by Walpole-Hamilton had none, and it was impossible for him to have any, having expatriated himself at the age of sixteen years. The patriotism that springs from the heart and fills the soul is not a plant that can be carried from clime to clime. The patriot is, made of the boy that plays around the spring, gambols in the orchard, reclines in the shade of trees in happy boyhood. It is "catching" in the schoolroom as it is imparted from urchin to urchin, and it is all over and around the playground. Washington and Henry, Adams and Putnam, Rutledge and Marion, were patriots. So were old George Clinton and Philip Schuyler. These were

"Native and to the manor born." But Hamilton, the adventurer, was ot, and could not be, moved by the entiments that were natural to these

Hamilton made one great speech in he constitutional convention, and then ears; but the romancershe disappears; but the romancers— one of whom makes him a compound of Aristides, Cincinnatus and Scipio setually for the constitution in the background. True, his writings secured the adoption of the constitution after Madison, Elsworth, Sherman and company had made it; but it was not that he believed in the constitution or loved it, but that he thought it better than the articles of confederation, because it lodged more power in the federal establishment

As the secretary of the treasury in Washington's cabinet he was at his greatest. He had the gift of organization, and he brought order out of chaos; but he had too much mental integrity or mental pride to pretend that the protective system was not a hardship on the people. And Mr. Stanley quoted from him some language that sounds marvelously Demcratic on the tariff question.

Mr. Dalzell made this declaration: "He certainly is a bold man who, in the face of history, contends today that the permanent policies which have entered into the statutes and character of our nation are not the policies dictated by Hamilton and his

And to that Mr. Stanley retorted: Here my temerity may argue more than my judgment, but I deny it. There never was a deduction more absolutely unfounded hurled defiantly into the teeth of history.

"What were the policies of Alexander Hamilton?

"He would have had a president for life-he is elected every four years. "He would have senators during good behavior they serve a fixed and definite term of six years.

"He would have the executive armed with an absolute veto-you can by two-thirds majority annul that veto.

"He would have muzzled free speech Jefferson opened the deliberations of this house to the naked view and candid criticism of a free and untrammeled press.

"He defended the alien and sedition laws-they are repealed. He founded a national bank-it is demolished. All his cherished and vaunted schemes are 'gone glimmering in the dream of things that were,' exploded fallacies, they litter the debris of history.

"I challenge the gentleman from Pennsylvania to give me one single solitary policy of Hamilton which was ever crystallized into law that lived. His policies are gone, his followers are dead. There are only left his apologists and his eulogists."

If Jefferson had not come back from France when he did it is more than possible that the colonies would have sought the protection of England, and that would have resulted in a return of allegiance to the British flag. When the French revolution came it was hailed with approval by the best of the intellectual world, including Edmund Burke, Charles James Fox, Thomas Jefferson and Thomas Paine. It was the revolt of liberty against despotism the long-delayed triumph of light over darkness; but in the compensations of human affairs the atrocities of the Terror were commensurate with the centuries of enormities that privilege had perpetuated in France, and there was a revulsion of public opinion. Even Burke became the most formidable of all the adverplauded. Hamilton agreed with Burke, and so did a far greater than Hamileven George Washington. There was actual war between France and the United States, and numerous battles fought on the water between the two powers. Washington was again appointed commander-inchief, and chose Hamilton as his chief lieutenant England and France were in a death grapple. Had war been declared and waged for a year it is morally certain that British rule would have been re-established in our coun-Jefferson prevented that war, and by that act he saved the Union. Mr. Dalzell had the temerity to challenge the conduct of Jefferson in the acquisition of Louisiana and asserted that the thing was accomplished in spite of Jefferson. And now it was that the Lord delivered the accomplished Pennsylvanian into the hands of the brilliant Kentuckian. Stephen A. Douglas, in reply to Seward, did not tower above his adversary more gigantically than did Stanley over Dalzell. It was this part of the speech showed what a genius for research is possessed by the gifted orator from the Second Kentucky district. It is too long to quote. One must read it entirely to get a proper conception of it. It is not at all remarkable that Mr. Dalzell was content to allow that the debate is a closed incident. Every intelligent onlooker in our political Vienna should read Dalzell's speech and then read Stanley's reply.

When Stanley came to discuss the duel between Burr and Hamilton he put an entirely new phase on the controversy. Hamilton was a believer in the code. He was on the field as Lauren's second in the duel with General Charles Lee. He sought a quarrel with John Adams that could have been settled, according to his ideas of personal honor, only on the field. He challenged James Monroe, and would have fought him if Aaron Burr had not lent his good offices and composed the difference without a hostile meeting. On the field of Weehawken he delayed the giving of the "word" till he could wipe his glasses to make his vision clearer, and yet we are told that his intention was to fire in the air. For years he had assailed Burr, and for years Burr held his peace. Hamilton's eulogists tell us that he accepted Burr's call to the field because the standards of those days made it imperative that he should do to. To that Stanley made this inexorable retort: "I agree that we should not judge the duelist of that day by the standard of this. But there is no logic by which lenge and condemn the sender. By that barbarous code he who was chargwith an infamous offense could not clear his skirts by proving its falsity. To prove the charge false and to fall to resent it was to aggravate the imputation of cowardice, in that day more odious than vice or crime. The same perverted public opinion which necessitated the acceptance forced the sending of a chailenge."

Could a retort be more conclusive? If Hamilton was a martyr of the bar barous code when he accepted, it necessarily follows that Burr was also a martyr when it required him to send the challenge.

Those fond of the brilliant, the ornate, the exuberant, the splendid, can find it in these passages with which Stanley closed his speech:

"For centuries neither the telescope of the astronomer nor the researches of science could solve the mystery of that misty light, that glimmering gossamer encircling the brow of night; at last the spectrum revealed in this nebula unborn worlds, held in a shimmering gauge; revolving masses of incandescent gas, cooling through the passing cycles of time, growing denser without, shrinking within, forming smoky concentric circles, a whirling luminous fog, congealing into molten rings drawn by their own gravity into rude globes, and these spinning spheres shaped by the plastic hand of Divinity like clay upon a potter's wheel, into planets and their satellites, new solar systems, swinging for the first time into their orbits in the trackless, fathomless depths above. Thus God peoples the heavens with radiant worlds.

"I have fancied that those daring bands of exiles, forgotten by one world and lost in the dark wilds of another. living and dying in ignorance of the mighty destiny of their children's children, conscious only that they were free—I have fancied that He, 'with whom a thousand years are as a day or a watch in the night when it is passed,' saw an unborn and puissant nation through all the mists of misery, persecution and death, through which succeeding generations passed, first to independence, then to the mastery of the land and sea.

"In the vast womb of the wilderness the colonies took form, though varying in their orbits and splendor, but they differed only 'as one star differs from another star in glory.' In the hour of destiny each found its own place about the great central power, to which, like the planets, they were eternally bound, yet forever separate. The fathers, I declare to you, heard the voice of God when they covered this continent with states, even as the heavens are bespangled with stars.

"The same peril awaits the star and the state. The state dissevered from her sisters is lost, even as a planet wrenched from its moorings, cometlike, becomes the wandering vagrant of the skies.

"Either, drawn by the compelling gravity of a central force into its mighty vortex, is annihilated by the power which should have been the source of light and life.

"From the chaos of disunion and the wreck of centralization may he who ordained long preserve this constellaion of states

"Let no new Hamilton arise to disturb or destroy their exquisite balble, they shall remain eternal as the revolving stars."

For years and years the dogmatism of Hamilton's eulogists has dominated American public thought. I only wish that Owsley Stanley would take time to elaborate this splendid speech of his and offer it to some leading magazine. It would carry confusion into every Hamilton camp, and shake the land so sold until the price in full walls of Harvard College themselves.

Pursuant to a judgment of the Lawrence Circuit Court, rendered at its April Term, 1908, in the above entitled action, the undersigned will, on MONDAY, JUNE 15th, 1908, at the front door of the Court House. in Louisa, Lawrence County, Kentucky, (that being the first day of tthe regular June term of the Lawrence County Court) offer for sale the following described tract of land, or a sufficient amount thereof to satlsfy said judgment for the sum of eighty-five and 50-100 dollars (85.50) interest from May 2, 1908 and costs of the said action.

Said land is described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning at a branch at the end of a field, thence running up branch to near an old saw mill seat to a point, to the High Knob near ance-harmonious, distinct, indissolu- Roland Kazees' land, thence around the top of the ridge to an old field, and thence a straight line to the beginning.

TERMS: Said sale will be made on a credit of six months, the purchaser to give bond with good and sufficient security for the payment of the purchase price, lien retained on the is paid.

F. L. STEWART,

Conley's Store, Louisa, Ky., carries in stock spectacles of all grades from 25c a pair up. We have nose glasses, riding and temple bow spectacles, rimless and regular styles, steel, aluminum, nickel, gold filled and solid gold frames. We also have the most perfect lenses made. We can fit any ordinary case defective vision, and we make no charge for the work of fitting. If your case is at all complicated we will direct you to reliable opticians or occulists who can properly handle the case. It cannot be done in Louisa. A real optician, one who is educated and skilled in optics, one of the most delicate sciences. There are more fakirs in this line than in almost any other business and the damage they ) to man's most important faculty and to his pocketbook at the same time is astounding. Beware of the faking ignoramus who claims to be a competent optician.

One Trial is Sufficient Proof:

The best clothes made-sounds better when spoken by a customer than by us. However, we leave it to them and they do say it. Would they say this if they didn't believe it?

People have gained sufficient proof by one or by dozens of trials to satisfy them that Northcott clothes never disappoint.

Northcott's determination [since the days of the 80's, when he began] to give only good quality and makeup is still remembered by every man who has given Northcott Clothes a trial. The styles were never snappier and better all 'round than this season.

A collection great enough to catch even out of the ordinary tastes. Start at $15 and go on up to $35. At every price above $15 you'll have good variety.
